

Words of Advice

You never know where your path will take you, so follow up on every opportunity that presents itself that even remotely matches your interests. This is especially true if you're meeting people outside your current area, you're learning a new skill, or taking in knowledge that excites you.

Shanna Nifoussi, Ph.D.

Associate Professor of Biology and Pre-Health University of Wisconsin - Superior

Dr. Nifoussi's primary responsibilities are the teaching and advising of biology and pre-health majors, and the mentoring of undergraduate research projects. Her main area of teaching focus is Cell Biology, Microbiology, Neurobiology. As the Faculty Senate Chair, she is a leader on campus, engaged in collaborative policy development with University Administration while representing the faculty voice.

Completed PhD in Pharmacology: 2010